

Paragraph 1.

Effects of Terrorism on education in Pakistan: Terrorism in Pakistan has affected education adversely. Due to the rise in militant activities in Pakistan specially the areas where there have been constant operations to combat these terrorist activities, education has suffered a lot. According to a report various terrorist activities has caused 26,501 fewer children to continue their education in Pakistan. Thus terrorism in Pakistan has proved to be unfavorable for education.

Paragraph 2:

Impact of social media on learning process of students.

Social media has profoundly impacted the learning of students.

Due to the invention of various apps and social media platforms students have the means to easily access educational materials for example books, lectures, journals etc. By watching the achievements of other people students are encouraged to work hard and achieve their goals. Moreover students can get access to their role models through apps like Instagram and Facebook and take guidance from them which further propel them to speed up their learning. One great mean for learning is "Online classes" where students can learn and achieve education by sitting in their homes. Hence social media has provided a better platform for the knowledge and education of students.

Paragraph 3.

Prevention is better than cure; for most of the people, taking precaution is actually difficult than taking medicines, when in fact prevention is a better treatment. Even though medicines are used for treatment of any disease but medicines have various side effects on the human body. Moreover there are evidences some medicines prove to be addictive in nature such as OPIODS which further adversely affect the human body. Another benefit of prevention is it helps in preventing spread of a disease. For example when covid 19 was novel and spreading rapidly the only way to be spared from it was to take drastic preventive measures. Thus it is more beneficial to take precautions than mindlessly taking medications or treatment.

Paragraph 4.

Increase in Population is one of the reasons of economic instability in Pakistan. Pakistan is a country in which the only thing that seems to be ^{increasing} ~~increasing~~ is its population. There is 1.98% increase in population in 2023 as compared to 2021. The resources in Pakistan are limited as compared to the people using it. Higher population rates requires more investment, while the current account deficit of Pakistan is decreased to USD 242 million, it is unable to meet the demand of the increased population. Increased population ^{consumes} ~~uses~~ the already declined currency reserves and resources. Hence population explosion is one of the ^{main} ~~cause~~ of deteriorating economic status of Pakistan.
