

Preci test: Money comes second for professional men

Professional ~~men~~ do not prioritise money above their profession. Although they like ~~making~~ money, but this is not their primary objective. For example, a dedicated soldier would prioritise winning battles over salary and a clergyman would focus over preaching rather than getting paid for it. Same is ~~the~~ with doctors. Despite their quest for money, ~~the~~ saving lives and curing patients should still be the primary ~~concern~~ concern for majority of doctors. Thus, all well-trained men will prioritise their work above money.

Better attempt but it still has some mistakes. Work on them.
