- ① Political instability is inversely proportionate to foreign direct investment.
- ② Low foreign reserves causes high inflation.
- ③ Hunger makes a man a murderer.
- ④ The penniless brutes do domestic violence.

Political instability is inversely proportionate to foreign direct investment. It stagnates for all the flourishing businesses and warns the investors to reconsider their decision of investing into a state.

whose ~~high~~ ups are busy in securing their seats. In such a state, processions rallies and marches are the tactics used by incumbents and their opponents; thus, the state has to suffer. As in Pakistan since the ^{In-}PM Imran Khan has been ousted, the rallies, marches and processions are not new but a normal. Resultantly, the stock market index is volatile, and the investors are not willing to invest in Pakistan. This is how high political instability leads to lower FDI.

Low foreign reserves causes high ~~inflation~~. A country having less foreign reserves has little money to pay for imported products. As a result, imported raw material is unaccessible, and the manufacturer has to charge more. Pakistan has to be deal with such a problem these days. During the first two months of the calendar year, the Central Bank of Pakistan did not open Letter of Credit as it had less than $5bn reserves. Consequently, food inflation reached at 40pc. So, it had been difficult for the public to put food on table for their children, since government has low foreign reserves.

It is said that a hungry man is an angry man. Hunger makes a man a murderer. It forces him to take the sword and chop the head of even his own child. For food, a hungry man can trample under his feet the innocent ones. Who can forget the heartrending incident in Karachi outside a charity distribution point. Twelve lives lost in that stampede. From this, it can be concluded that hunger makes a man a brute.

The penniless brutes do domestic violence. They are unable to be harsh with their higher authorities, so they yield at their women. They deprive them (the women) of their basic rights, like the Taliban has done. There in Afghanistan Star, women cannot travel without a male guardian, and most of the girls have been forbidden to attend high school. Thus, empty pockets make the men monsters.
