"Pen is mightier than the sword."

"If you want to change the world pick up your pen and write" - Martin Luther.

→ The famous saying "Pen is mightier than a sword," signifies that writing is a much powerful tool than violence, as a means of social or political change. The power of a pen is eternal, while the power of a sword is short-lived. Pen ^{Has played} an integral part in transforming societies throughout its course of evolution since the early ages. It not only educates a man, but also promises a fruitful destiny to those who put it into good use. It is a much powerful weapon than a sword as it mediates between conflicts and contradictions, for example, most of the upheavals, wars, and conflicts have been resolved through pacts, treaties, and agreements.

→ A pen enables a man to express his feelings and emotions into writing. Significant writings of the poets and researchers have been preserved for the greater good of the society, as ^{they} it may contain important lessons from the past and future aspirations for the ~~area~~ following generations to comply with. In comparison to a sword, a pen renders man with freedom of expression where there is no limit to expressing ~~his~~ his thoughts in a promulgation.

→ It has indeed, been believed, that the reformist attributes of a pen have played a sufficient part in the ^{Evolution} upbringing of the society. It has instilled a sense of competition amongst subjects of the society, where writers are striving hard in coming up with the best of their published materials.

→ To put it in a nutshell, pen has been of a greater advantage to the world, than the sword. It has not costed anyone their lives, which is a brutal characteristic of the sword. While the energy of the sword ends with failure, sacrifice and loss, the pen brings in motive, impulse and growth to the soul.

- ① More emphasis on pen and writing.
- ② This is comparative writing, expand the comparison.
- ③ Comparative Analysis.
- ④ Don't give examples, extract their gist.
- ⑤ Cohesion of ideas, therefore brainstorm before you start.

Examples validate the writing. They should be merged using the same expression as used in the rest of the paragraph. Without examples the writing is merely a 'claim' or subjective opinion.
