

Threats To national Security of Pakistan

Pakistan is facing serious threats relating to its national security. These threats include traditional as well as non-traditional threats.

Among traditional are external threats that seek to undermine the security of state Pakistan and its territorial integrity. While non-traditional are those security threats which are challenges to survival and well-being of people of Pakistan like climate crisis, natural disasters, drug trafficking, food shortages, etc. Consequently, Pakistan is moving towards instability day-to-day. The instability affects the economic stability, and social harmony and continues to instil a sense of insecurity among the citizens at large. To be concluded, it can be said that the threats to the national security in Pakistan which are witnessed are leading the country into hot waters.