Title: A visit to Cherokee

I was looking for some exotic holiday place when John suggested Cherokee Oklahoma. We visited Qualla boundary there the town was presenting the picture of paradise with its beautiful scenery. Qualla boundary was dispensing the rich history and culture of Cherokee to the tourists. Despite having communication problems, we managed to reach the memento shops where we met George, who was quite good in English. While talking with George we came to know that the city didn't depend on the trade only. People also earn some money for survival by different means including arranging entertainment gals and games. We also visited museum which was the complete picture of their history and culture.
