

Batch 54

UROOJ KHAN

Title: A Trip to Cherokee

The Author planned a trip to Cherokee on the suggestion of his friend. There they visited Qualla, surrounded by mountains depicting a paradise.

The tourists were represented with tribal crafts and lifestyles of 18th century. The author along his friend went to an antiques shop, where they met George who was speaking fluent English. George invited them for lunch and told them about his occupation.

Furthermore the author learnt from him that Cherokee not only depend on tourism rather they try other means for income and one of them was Bingo "Weekend" attracting people for different games including Super Jackpot and warrior game. Their last stop was a museum in Qualla, where a variety of art was present. According to author he really missed the trip and planned to visit another exotic place ~~to~~ in future.