Vacation Trip to Exotic Place

In her last year's vacation she wanted a soothing tour away from the masses of people. And went to Cherokee on John's advice. They witnessed pleasing mountainous look in "Qualla Boundary" town of Cherokee, where in summer nights tourists were briefed about the past of Cherokee through plays. Wondering on souvenir shops they met George, who knew English, and spent time with him till lunch. George told them that he had to work whole day during the tour season but found it better than cutting woods. He told them that Bing weekend is celebrated during tour off-peak period, which provides Cherokees additional income. Finally they visited museum where they learnt about the origin of Cherokees through art. Back home she plans another exotic tour.
