Title: Manto's Realist View of Life

Manto was a victim of social evils and entered into a self-satisfied state. Cases were filed against him for his writings. However, he kept exploring the harsh realities of life. He highlighted the sex issue as a socio-economic issue, with the center of concentration was poor. For him, man does both good and bad acts. His readers could easily understand his concerns on socio-economic issues because his characters acted like human beings. He was aware of man's weaknesses. He treated vulgarity artistically. Like other great writers of his time, his writings were liked by many people, and people were able to relate themselves with his characters.
