

Q #02

Lethality of Misdirected Energy and Prospects of Rest for the Mankind

The world is mostly beset by those people who prefer misdirected work to rest. Even the devil must be the busiest creature - rather than the laziest one. Granted, the world is in chaos and it is so owing to lack of passive virtues. Humans are capable of achieving anything except kindness and a moment of reflection. Most of man's energetic qualities are misdirected and this has historically proved disastrous. The very pattern of mislead work is at fault. Heading towards the path of suffering is suicidal when there is choice of taking rest and giving the chosen path a second thought. Thus, if laziness is not considered a criminal act, humans will still gain from the idea. Therefore, most of the movers and shakers of the world will do well to do nothing at all but lay calm and regain their mental faculties first.

(word count) passage: 436
precis: 145