

Title : A trip to Cherokee

The writer found it difficult to choose a destination for a tour. On his friend's suggestion, he finalized a trip to Cherokee, a country in state of Oklahoma. He visited a historical place of Cherokee "Qualla bandy". A shopkeeper named as George welcomed them in a heartwarming manner. George also invited for a lunch. He talked about his profession in a nostalgic manner. For him being a shopkeeper is still better than being a woodcutter. Cherokee's way of income do not solely depend on trade rather entertainment is also a source of income. The museum was a true depiction of Cherokee's culture. The writer is excited to pay his second visit to this place.
