There are three different groups having different perspectives for freedom in education. First group say that children should be completely free and second say that they should be under some authority. Third group that seems illogical says that children should be morally perfect even if they are completely free. This group beliefs that education is only an opportunity and for self-development and growth. Author disagrees with this group because they ignore importance of knowledge and co-operation to solve existing problems. If children are left unchecked they may lack self control and moral values. Therefore, education should equip children with morality and mental strength along with growth.
