Title: A Memorable Trip to Qualla Boudry

The author went on a trip with his friend to Cherokee because trips to Australia and Japan were very common. In Cherokee, they went to a town called Qualla Boudry which had a beautiful scenery of mountains. The place represented lifestyle of 18th century. Despite a language issue, the author and his friend was able to find a souvenir shop that had tribal crafts such as rubber tomahawks and Tepees. There they met a guy named George who was very good in speaking english and invited them for lunch. George told them that he had to work extra time during tourist season but it was still better than his old job. He also told them that the tribe
