

Men's & Greatness Emblem

Norseman, from Teuton believes ~~in~~ in strength of his body. The ancient crest of a pickaxe was an expression of sturdy independence, which distinguishes Norsemen descendants. Scandinavian mythology, had a strong symbol of God with a hammer. Such symbol of hammer reflects the main characteristic of individual energy and determination. Indeed, the commitment and energy of people add values to the land, which is crucial for greatness. The observer emphasizes that energetic individual strengthen a state and made the land crucial. Notably, energy ^{enables man to} overcomes challenges and moves people forward. Success comes from hardwork. These energy of will of the people builds hope, which is the essence of life.

Total Words = 117
Required = 135

(ii) Search of ...

EXERCISE 3

There is a famous speech recorded of an old Norseman, thoroughly characteristic of the Teuton. "I believe neither in idols nor demons," said he, "I put my sole trust in my own strength of body and soul." The ancient crest of a pickaxe with the motto of "Either I will find a way or make one," was an expression of the same sturdy independence which to this day distinguishes the descendants of the Norsemen. / Indeed nothing could be more characteristic of the Scandinavian mythology, than that it had a god with a hammer. / A man's character is seen in small matters, and from even so slight a test as the mode in which a man wields a hammer, his energy may in some measure be inferred. / Thus an eminent Frenchman hits off in a single phrase the characteristic quality of the inhabitants of a particular district in which a friend of his proposed to settle and buy land. "Beware," said he, "of making a purchase there; I know the men of that department; the pupils who come from it to our veterinary school at Paris do not strike hard upon the anvil; they want energy; and you will not get a satisfactory return on any capital you may invest there." A fine and just appreciation of character, indicating the thoughtful observer; and strikingly illustrative of the fact that it is the energy of the individual men that gives strength to a State, and confers a value even upon the very soil which they cultivate.

The cultivation of this quality is of the greatest importance; resolute determination in the pursuit of worthy objects being the foundation of all true greatness of character. Energy enables a man to force his way through irksome drudgery and dry details, and carries him onward and upward in every station in life. It accomplishes more than genius, with not one-half the disappointment and peril. It is not eminent talent that is required to ensure success in any pursuit, so much as purpose, —not merely the power to achieve, but the will to labour energetically and perseveringly. Hence energy of will may be defined to be the very central power of character in a man—in a word, it is the Man himself. It gives impulse to his every action, and soul to every effort. Thus hope is based on it,—and it is hope that gives the real perfume to life.

I also write sentence by sentence precis.

The belief that Norsemen have trust in pure is amply revealed by the fact that their God is represent strength neither in idols nor demons," said he, "I put my sole trust in my own strength of body and soul."

Précis= Norsemen, from Teuton, believes in strength of his body.

The ancient crest of a pickaxe with the motto of "Either I will find a way or make one," was an expression of the same sturdy independence which to this day distinguishes the descendants of the Norsemen.

Précis= The ancient crest of a pickaxe was a expression of strong independence, which distinguishes Norsemen descendants.

Indeed nothing could be more characteristic of the Scandinavian mythology, than that it had a god with a hammer. A man's character is seen in small matters, and from even so slight a test as the mode in which a man wields a hammer, his energy may in some measure be inferred.

Précis= Scandinavian mythology, had a strong Symbol of god with a hammer with a hammer. Such symbol of hammer reflects the main characteristic of individual energy and determinace.

Thus an eminent French- man hits off in a single phrase the characteristic quality f the inhabitants of a particular district a which a friend of his proposed to settle and buy land "Beware," said he, "of making a purchase there I know the men of that department; the pupils who me from it to our veterinary school at Paris do not strike upon the anvil: they want energy, and you ill not get a satisfactory return on any capital you may invest there." A fine and just appreciation character, indicate, the thoughtful observer; and strikingly illustrative of the fact that it is the energy of the individual men that gives strength to a State, and confers a value even upon the very soil which they cultivate.

Précis=Indeed, the commitment and energy of people add values to the land, which is crucial for greatness. The observer emphasizes that energetic individual strengthen a state and made the land crucial.