

PRÉCIS EXERCISE 5

Q: Write a précis of the following passage in about 100 words and suggest the title: (20+5)

The attention we give to terrorism often seems disproportionate to its real importance. Terrorism incidents make superb copy for journalists, but kill and maim fewer people than road accidents. Nor is terrorism politically effective. Empires rise and fall according to the real determinants of politics—namely overwhelming force or strong popular support—not according to a bit of mayhem caused by isolated fanatics whom one would take seriously enough to vote for it. Indeed, the very variety of incidents that might be described as "terrorism" has been such as to lead critics to suggest that no single subject for investigation exists at all. Might we not regard terrorism as a kind of minor blotch on the skin of an industrial civilization whose very heart is filled with violent dreams and aspirations. Who would call in the dermatologist when the heart itself is sick.

But popular opinion takes terrorism very seriously indeed and popular opinion is probably right. For the significance of terrorism lies not only in the grotesque nastiness of terroristic outrages but also in the moral claims they imply. Terrorism is the most dramatic exemplification of the moral fault of blind willfulness. Terrorism is a solipsistic denial of the obligation of self-control we all must recognize when we live in civilized communities.

Certainly the sovereign high road to misunderstanding terrorism is the pseudo-scientific project of attempting to discover its causes. Terrorists themselves talk of the frustrations which have supposedly necessitated their actions but to transform these facile justifications into scientific hypotheses is to succumb to the terrorists own fantasies. To kill and maim people is a choice people make, and glib invocations of necessity are baseless. Other people living in the same situation see no such necessity at all. Hence there are no "causes" of terrorism; only decision to terrorize. It is a moral phenomenon and only a moral discussion can be adequate to it.

(CSS 1980)

PRECIS Writing:-

- 1- Terrorist popularity is because of population
- 2- People should ignore Terrorism.

PRECIS :-

Terrorism is not an important issue, the way media highlight them. Neither it effect the politics nor they are responsible for rise and fall of politics. Indeed, a very few incident can be describes as terrorism even not a single subject for investigation exist at all.

But, popular opinion takes terrorism very ~~to~~ serious may be they are right. It should be noted, the whole agenda of terrorism is based upon the shit and fall of drama, people awarshess required to know these agenda. These shit agenda however, is misunderstanding, to kill the people, to make the people disable and propagandas. Therefore, terrorism is not a problematic, the way people take them

n a big trouble for a society.