

Topic : Climate Influence : In Shaping Human Energy and Nature

In writer's view, challenges of cold seem to boost energies. But when men confront with insurmountable obstacles of severe cold weather, his energies are dampened by despair. And the absence of any challenge leaves him with no chance for practice. Unlike that, only moderate climate prompt arduous but hopeful struggles.

This existing environment makes him to do manageable work for living. While life in the tropical contrasts significantly with it. People there easily sustain their lives with little food and clothes. The contrast between different seasons parallels the distinction in human nature between tropical and temperate. In hot weather humans feel relax. However, cold demands engagement of body and mind.
