Man's Inability to Balance his Life

Psychoses and neuroses shows man's inability to control himself. He becomes egoistic and make it part of his unconscious. He becomes unable to make his way out in case of failure and get deviated by unacceptable approaches of life. He loses his emotional control and in such cases one ability of his mind overpowers the others. And, he develops a biased approach towards life. This emotional disorder might lead him to self-alienation and he get detached from his true self. Some modern people might consider it a detachment from society, which is acceptable in some cultures but disregarded by others as mental disorder. Though, this is not about the deviation from norms but from one's true self.
