Title: Manto's Bold Realism: Navigating Society's Hypocrisy

Manto was prone to social hypocrisy and his writings were accused of vulgarity and immorality. But, he ignored the conservatives and revealed the reality of sex passion in a depressed society along with lower class's problems. For Manto, man is a mixture of good and bad. He always supported the lower and middle classes because of socioeconomic reality of society. He was fully aware of man's weakness and treated vulgarity artistically. Men and women relate themselves to his writing for their passion. (86/290)

Title: Humanity Hardships: Natural and Artificial

11 Humanity faces two types of hardship: one from nature and the other caused by man's oppression against his fellow beings. But, he maintains supremacy over all wild animals because of his free hand and intelligence. Natural disasters have given him a tough time, but he secured daily bread through persistent hard work. Today natural disasters come but humans overcome them through scientific development. Hard work continues because of the cooperation among humanity and against the natural holocaust. However, man's exploitation by another man continues through wars and wealth's distribution. Fear is still dominant in every heart because of the elite power-grepping race. (101/310)
