

___/___/202

Day: _____

Brain Drain: Causes and Consequences in Pakistan:

2. Consequences

- a) Rise in uneducated population: rising number of illiterate people
- b) Security threat: loss of manpower
- c) intellectual bankruptcy: losing literary and media personalities
- d) paucity of talent in sports: losing achievements
- e) Stagnant growth of country: brain drain of policy makers and talented bureaucrats

Brain Drain: Causes and Consequences

The population is considered a backbone of any country. If the country has energetic, talented, skillful, and dynamic population, it will definitely make a progress. On the other hand, if the country lacks population with the described qualities, it not only faces problems in making a progress but also remained fail to compete with other countries. But the thing that makes the matters even more worse is that if the talented population of the country begin to migrate towards another country in search of better opportunities. Same is the case with Pakistan, because it is facing a problem of brain drain. The underlying causes of brain drain include job insecurity, overpopulation and poor standard of living. Moreover, corruption, nepotism, and political instability are the reason behind it. These causes lead to drastic impacts on the country such as rising the number of uneducated people, enhancing security threat and creating intellectual bankruptcy. In addition to this, paucity of talent in sports and stagnation in the economic growth of the country emerge as a result of these mentioned causes. Therefore, Pakistan is facing severe problem of brain drain due to its internal problems. As a result of this, it is facing various impacts on its overall growth. Unless the issues of brain drain are addressed efficiently; Pakistan can neither become prosperous and nor respectable.