

Title : Experienced minds prevails

Courage is a natural gift followed by health which a general must possess. Several generals are praised for their determination and calm nature. However, a general seems to deter one's enemies only when one is experienced. Undoubtedly, a number of leaders i.e Alexander, Napoleon, Wolfe, Wellington and Hannibal may have achieved their goals at early age, but the experienced and aged ones are worthy admirable. Julius Caesar and Cromwell in their 40s while Marlborough, Turenne, Moltke, Robert and Foch left their shadows on history in their 60s. The bravery and boldness of youth is absolutely appreciable, but one cannot neglect the experienced judgements, rational decisions of the mature minds. Those rippled minds have always an edge over young bloods for their bold decisions. Therefore, a young general can defeat an older one, but the decision making ability prevails in experienced ones.
