

Documentaries by Nizar Hassan

Nizar Hassan was a Palestinian anthropologist and filmmaker. He started his career from TV and then turned to film-making in the 1990s. His first documentary film questioned the absurd notion of Zionist independence when in fact they are stealing land from Palestinians. He decided to make another one when Israel decided to annex more land. This documentary, "My Grandfather's Path", puts Palestinian ideas and aspirations into perspective. The writer believes that this is an important aspect because too much focus on enemy's brutality can rob you of <sup>the beauty</sup> your ideas and aspirations.

For decades, different forms of arts across the world have retained this essence. The writer believes that Nizar's new documentary is one such addition. And although it is brutally long, it needs to be watched completely.
