Against the flattering and obedient attitude towards the colonialistic British values which were promoted by the British rulers and adopted by the people of India at that time. Both Syed Ahmed Khan and his high ranking and enlightened son Syed Mahmood tried to adopt such an attitude as if they were equal to and counterpart of the British. Not only Muslim, but the whole Indian nation was well known of the incident of Agra Darbar of 1867. Syed Ahmed Khan had seceded from this court because the Indians had been given inferior ranks as compared to the British. In the same court, Syed Ahmed Khan was soon to be awarded a medal. William, the Commissioner of Meerut, was delegated the powers to present the medal to Syed Ahmed Khan at the Aligarh railway station.
