TRANSLATION:-

It is generally perceived that the laws of a country and the freedom of its citizens are antithetical to each other. Apparently, this does not seem wrong. Every law imposes restrictions on citizens in one way or the other. If the laws of a country are great in number, then there will be more restrictions under which the individual's liberty gets overwhelmed. On the contrary, if the laws are less in number, then the scope of citizen's freedom widens.
