

Q2 What is the gender analysis of development theories, write note on WID, WAD and GAD

1 Introduction

Gender analysis is a concept that discusses the differences that exists between male and female and the causes of the differences. Gender analysis usually focus on the wayforward to bring change in the lives of the women. Gender analysis focuses on the equity instead of equality. These are different theories of development and gender analysis has done to find out the differences and wayforward for the differences.

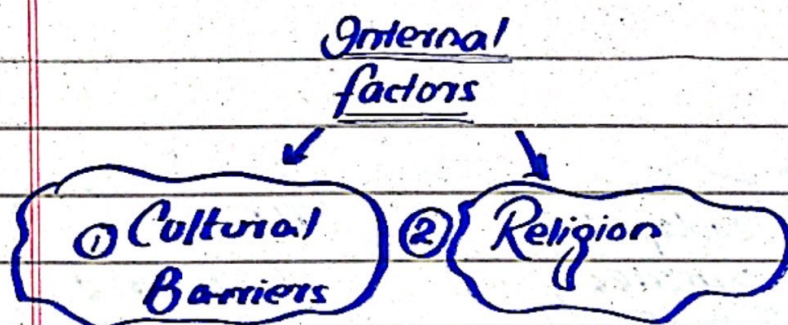

2 Theories of development and gender analysis

There are different theories of development and these theories discuss how women are marginalized and what factors are responsible for the marginalization of women. These theories are modernization, world system and dependency theory.

3- Gender Analysis of Modernization Theory by "Rostow"

According to this theory there are the internal factors which are responsible for the woman subordination in the developing countries like cultural barriers and the religious factors.

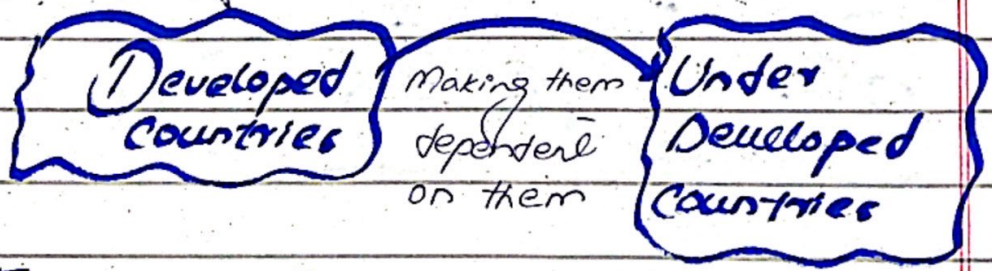

Modernization theory believes that there is greater equality in the developed countries. Modernization gave rise to the idea of women in development.

4- Criticism of modernization theory

There is a criticism that modernization theory did not discuss the other factors responsible for the subordination of women like external factors, economic factors and problems of black women.

5- Dependency theory and gender analysis by Raul Prebisch

According to Raul Prebisch, it is not the internal factor which is responsible but the external factors are responsible for it. Wealthier countries of today have exploited the poor countries by making them dependent on them.

6- Feminist Analysis of dependency theory

By studying it gives an analysis how women are kept dependent on males and being exploited by the males. They are even exploited by male ^{crop} labor

7- Criticisms on dependency theory

Dependency theory did not discuss how feudal structure is exploiting whom. Nor it has explained how multinational cooperations are exploiting women. So it ignored some of the other factors responsible for the exploitation

8- ~~World~~ World System theory by Immanuel Wallerstein

According to Immanuel Wallerstein both the internal and external factors are responsible for the subordination of women

Factors Responsible

According to world system theory there are three levels of hierarchy consisting of core, periphery and Semiperiphery. The core use semiperiphery to exploit the periphery

9 Feminist Analysis on world System theory

The theory emphasizes that the global inequalities lead to inequalities at societal level women being on the periphery and the male or peripheral system is on the core and exploiting women.

10 Criticism on world System theory

According to some of the feminist gendered, race, class and ethnic analysis is not the part of the world system theory and they should include this.

Gender Approaches to Development

11 Gender Approaches to development

There are different approaches to development that arise in different theories like modernization theory gave rise to women in development concept. Similarly, dependency theory gave rise to women and development concept and world system theory gave rise to the concept of gender and development.

Gender Approaches to Development

12 Women In development (WID)

Women in development rise after the modernization theory. WID is an approach that calls for greater attention to women in the development policy and practice and it also emphasized on the need of integrating women in development.

Women and development (WAD)

WAD approach originated in 1975. Its focus was to explain women and their relation between capitalism or the material conditions that exploit women. Its focus is to bring "women only developed programs" and society should acknowledge the work that has done by the women. It also focus on to make women an active part of society in economic, private and public sphere.

(a) Results of WAD

The results of WAD women were accepted as important economic actors of society and they were recognized in public and private sphere as central to maintain social structure.

Gender And Development (GAD)

The GAD development approach was originated after world system theory in 1980s by social feminism. The approach focuses on how inequality between the relations hinders development. The GAD approach focuses on the biological inequalities and also how social roles, reproductive and economic roles are linked to gender. It looks the overall societal structure and seeks to empower all genders.

	WID	WAD	GAD
Origin	1973	1975	1980
Theories	Modernization	Dependency	World system
Focus	Integration in development	Active part in development	Empower all genders
Strategies	Participation in politics, education	women as economic actors in public and private sphere	look into overall societal structure eliminate patriarchy
Problem	Internal factors	External factors	Both
Criticism	Did not focus on economic and black women	not focus on overall structure	• Separatists • Feminism

Conclusion

Gender analysis focused on the women related issues why they are subordinate and the way forward. Gender analysis is a proper strategy to mark the problems and to eliminate them. Similarly approaches like CWA, WAP and GAD are imported to integrate every gender into the society and to focus on the women related issues.

overall a good answer!!
