5- Critical Analysis of the role of superpowers
in 21st century in making choices
of peace or war:

6- Conclusion:

Superpowers have the commandable impact on world politics. With their immense geo-political influence and military might, they have the potential to decide the fate of the globe. However, the question is still there, are the superpowers truly agents of peace or do their actions lead to war? The role and might of superpowers in international arena is a debatable issue. However, one cannot deny their exceptional potential of making and enforcing world peace. Like, it is the ability of superpowers to end conflicts, stop proliferation of nuclear weapons, ensure arms control and disarmament, and sanction the aggressive countries, all of the above are the abilities of superpowers to ensure world peace. Moreover, superpowers have the mandate to take preemptive actions against any country or non-state actor that becomes a threat to world peace. Although, by doing a retrospective analysis of superpowers role in making choices of peace, there are a lot of examples <sup>that</sup> can be cited. For instance, formation of collective security alliance in form of united nations, a choice of peace made during cuban missile crisis, various economic and military sanctions over aggressive countries, peaceful resolution of different conflicts through agreements, have showed that superpowers have made choices of peace in the past to make this world a better place. On the contrary, there are events in the past where superpowers have made choices of war over peace. For example, USA invasion of Iraq and Afghanistan, US bombing of Yugoslavia in 1991, Russian invasion of Ukraine in 2022, escalation of Palestine - Israel war by USA, and, most important, never ending Middle East crisis, all are the choices of war made by superpowers over peace. However, the role of superpowers in 21st century, is bit controversial and complex. The multipolar disorder in 21st century indicates the choices of war made by superpowers to assert their might.
