States

Society came into existence as a result when people surrendered some of their rights and privileges to the state. Thus, states became the guardians, and adopted different forms of governance in order to guarantee the safeguards of its citizens. This system of rights and duties established between a state, and ^{its} citizens can be disrupted by people of power. When such disruption is occurred due to interference of military persons ~~are~~ using military power can be termed as military adventurism. This military adventurism disrupts ^{not only} the functioning of states, but also proves to be detrimental for them. Pakistan has faced repeated adventurism over the history of seventy-six years ~~of independence~~. The first adventure was led by General Ayub Khan, followed by Zia-ul-Haq and General Pervez Musharraf. These three military adventurism in the past. have been have shown its dire consequences in ~~the present~~. Emergence of weak political system is a consequence of military adventurism, and era of musical chair can be termed as the most pertinent example. Moreover, formation of independent judiciary in Pakistan has seems to be a utopian concept. Case study of Zulfiqar Ali Bhutto's trial will highlight how judiciary at times have been pressurized. Furthermore, due to long era of military dictatorships, institutions have become numb to produce results. This military adventurism in the past can be seen as detrimental in the present. To avoid future interventions, power should be divided between the state organs, US system of checks and balances can be utilized for the aforementioned purpose. Consequences of military adventurism clearly proves it as threat to states environment. To neutralize any future possibility of military intervention adventurism the state should ensure political consensus and women empowerment in particular.
