

Hunkering Down Policy Attempt proper questions for evaluation and not notes.

The General Elections are going to be held soon. All parties are trying their best to foster their party leaders to be elected for major positions. If we talk about next Finance Minister position, then there are major chances of Ishaq-Dar to be elected. There are two reasons behind this. The first one is that PML-N leader Mian-Muhammad Nawaz Sharif is engaged with Mr Dar due to his family relations. The other one is that ^{Mr} Dar wants to rule finance government under his thumb.

The economy of Pakistan has deteriorated in previous years. The foreign revenue is declined to major level.

The foreign exports are decreasing at a glance. The Pakistan's economy has stuck behind "Production Frontiers"

In this condition the rulers can adopt two policies. The first one is to "burst out" that will change the connection between state and capital. The other one is hunker down policy in which investment rate and foreign rate is constant. Mr Dar has adopted the Hunker down policy. In this policy the more is extracted from the system than the system has. Mr Dar has also hunker down his bones because according to this policy finance rates, what is exported, who is exporting and all revenue related matters comes under finance minister.

Mr. Dar managed very well the finance issues after nuclear sanctions. Moreover, he persuaded PML-N leader

Mr. M. Nawaz Sharif that the opposition's finance ~~minister~~ ^{Minister} could not manage scarcities that led to oversize inflation and heavy tax implementation.

So ~~there are~~ ~~with~~ ~~by~~ there are a strong chances of Ishaq-Dar to be the next finance minister.

If still there will be other ~~him~~ minister than him, then he will try his best to run finance related matters under his thumb.
