

2. Write a précis of the following passage and suggest a suitable title:

(20)

Despite complaints from viewers, television commercials are not getting any more realistic. Their makers continue to present idealized people in unreal situations. The wide gaps between their fanciful depiction and the mundane realities of life in most cases make them appear funny as well as repulsive. A footballer suddenly starts scoring goals after consuming a particular energy-drink. A would-be groom avoids hugging his father-in-law because he recalls not having used a particular shampoo that morning. A busy manager leaves an important meeting to grab a dozen packets of his favourite cookies, and so on. The advertisers also persist in showing a version of male-female relationships that can hardly exist in two households in an entire city. A wife panics simply because a meddlesome neighbor points out that her husband's shirt is dirty, while another fears for her marriage because her finicky husband doesn't like her coffee. What do the advertisers know about us, or how we see ourselves, that make them continue to plunge millions of dollars into these kinds of commercials? They probably don't know that these glamorous and noisy clips in no way promote the product for which they are aired. The reported number of viewers may be heartening and tempting for the manufacturers of the products. It might also be the main reason for them to keep on hiring the advertisers for promoting these products. In fact, however, these advertisements are mostly watched either to laugh at, or because the viewers are unable to skip them by changing the channel as soon as they start.

the reality of

Television Commercials and Reality

Television commercials are not ~~going to be~~ factual in spite of resistance from people for ~~showing unnatural circumstances~~. As there exists a huge difference between what is portrayed in these advertisements and ~~what~~ ~~are~~ the ground realities of life.

there is no sense of this sentence

furthermore

Further, advertisers might not know that these fancy ads couldn't promote their products. Although, high viewership can be alluring for manufacturers and one of reasons for hiring advertisers.

However, these commercials are only watched to be mocked at or viewers do not have options to change the channel.

this sentence is too long there is too much explanation in the precis clarity issue and be to the point 6/20 need improvement

Total Words: 261
Precis Words: 87