

Name :- Asad Ali
Batch :- 207
Task :- English Essay

Topic :- Global Politics and International Relation

Work on grammar and structural mistakes

Outline

A. Introduction

1. 9/11 incident
2. How global politics ^{shaped} and international relations
3. Thesis Statement

B. Global Politics

1. Power dynamics
2. Multilateral institution
 - a. United Nations (UN)
3. Economic alliances
4. Sovereignty and Security
5. Global governance

C. International Relations

1. Diplomacy
2. Global Cooperation

3. International law
4. International treaties and characters
5. Globalization

D. Role of Global Politics in the International Relations

E. Conclusion

Make proper phrases instead of just writing to generic

Essay

On the 11th September, 2001, the humanity faced one of the biggest terrorist attacks in the United States of America. 9/11 was a horrific incident that changed world order. USA maintained its unipolarity and reshaping international relations. Global politics widely contribute to shaping international relations. The dominant powers influenced to other states and international institutions. The Global politics include many tools. The power dynamics is the tool of maintaining balance of power between states and organizations. The global politics influenced through multilateral institutions and economic alliances. The sovereignty and security are major tools of global politics. Global politics influence by the global governance. As well as, international relations contains diplomacy, global cooperations as a principle. The international law and international treaties & character contribute largely in the international relations. Globalization is the core principle of international relations. The global politics has significant role in the international relations. Hence, it is proved that global politics and international relations merge to each other and both have role in international scenario.

However, global politics have many features that enhancing the role of global politics in the world.

In addition, power dynamic is most effective tool to balance of power between two or more states. It is used to shaping interactions, decision-making processes. There are many types of power dynamic such as traditional powers, evolving power dynamics and emerging power dynamic. For example, traditional power dynamic in global politics associated with military strengths. Evolving power dynamic in global politics link with transformation of technology. Emerging power dynamics associated with economic dominance such as China, Brazil etc. Hence, power dynamic play important role in the global politics to shaping a more just and equitable global order.

As well as multilateral institutions serving platform for international cooperation. It promoting global norms and standards. They encompass a diverse range of organization such as intergovernmental organization (IGOs) and non-governmental organization (NGOs). These institutions has capabilities to tackle global issues that transcend national border. For example, United Nation (UN) is the prominent global intergovernmental organization that secure peace and security internationally. In a conclusion, these multilateral institutions play significant role in global politics to provide essential platforms for international cooperation.

Furthermore, economic alliance has vital role to fostering economic Cooperation, promoting trade, investment and influencing global economic governance. Economic alliance can contribute to states and international economic growth and development. It can also foster regional integration by strengthening ties among neighbour countries. Economic alliances influences global economic governance by shaping international trade rules. For example, World Trade organization is the international economic governance institution that formulating trade policies and set rules and standards. World trade organization influence global politics. Hence, economic alliances create cooperation and competition between states in the global arena.

Moreover, sovereignty and security is the fundamental concept in the global politics to pursue the right of self-determination. States find the ways to protect their security and sovereignty. International cooperation and diplomacy are essential tools for managing this balance. As they provide platforms for states to address shared security concerns. For instance, UN Security Council is the platform where nations shared their security concerns. Security Council has capability to resolution of state concern through mutual cooperation. In a conclusion, sovereignty and security has important role to develop world order.

Along with, global governance is a mechanism for providing frameworks of international cooperation. Global governance provide platforms for states and non-state actors to collaborate on issues that transcend national border. Global governance also facilitate in the financial crisis. For instance, international monetary fund (IMF) is the global governance institution that help to states to survive in the international world. Global governance is supporting the efforts to achieve sustainable development and poverty reduction. Therefore, global governance has crucial role in global politics to promote international cooperation and collaboration.

In the light of global politics, international relations concerned with relations across boundaries of nation state and international intergovernmental bodies.

Besides, diplomacy is the primary tool by which states, actors, organizations and international institutions negotiate with peaceful purpose.

Diplomacy is the power dynamic wide range of skills that includes communication, negotiation, analytical thinking and cultural sensitivity. Diplomacy play important role to prevent conflicts, resolving disputes. For instance, United Nation Security Council has resolved number of disputes such as Iran-Iraq war and Rwandan genocide etc through diplomacy. The effective diplomacy contribute to building trust among nations and international institutions. Shortly, diplomacy is an essential tool for navigating the complex and ever-changing world of international relations.

Furthermore, global cooperation is the act of countries working together to achieve their common goals. In the increasingly interconnected world, cooperation is crucial for fostering peace, promoting prosperity and ensure sustainable development. For example, international cooperation is necessary to mitigate climate change due to which many agreements are available such as Paris agreement, COP27 etc. These agreements are landmarks accord that counter climate change globally. Therefore, global cooperation is the valuable in the 21st century. It shaping the direction of international relations.

Moreover, international law contributes to stability in international relations by establishing principle of states. The principle of state sovereignty, territorial integrity and peaceful settlement of disputes are enshrined in international law. International law protects fundamental human rights and promote a rule-based global order. For instance, international law governs the use and management of the world's oceans including navigation rights, fisheries and environmental protection. These rules is a structured of framework for cooperation, facilitating the exchange of information etc. In a conclusion, international law is the main component of international relations.

Page 8

that evolving to meet the needs of a changing global landscape.

Along with, international treaties are formal agreements between states that establish obligations and norms in international relations.

Treaties establish rules and procedures for states to engage in cooperation on a wide range of issues. For example, Paris agreement is a multilateral agreement to address global warming and the climate change. On the other example, treaty of westphalia established the principles of states.

International treaties and character is the essential instruments that shaping international relations.

Hence, international treaties and characters protect fundamentals of human rights and establish global order.

As well as, globalization has profoundly impacted international relations to shaping power dynamics between nations in the 21st century. It influence wide range influence across various dimension in the international affairs including political, economic, social and and cultural. Globalization has fostered economic interdependence among nations. It is creating a globalized economy with interconnected financial markets, supply chains and trade networks. For example, FTAs reduce or eliminate trade barriers and promote the flow of goods and services between countries. Therefore, globalization has revolutionized international relations to creating an interdependent world.

However, global politics has a vital role in international relations.

Lastly, global politics examines the international order through the distribution of power. Global politics influences international relations through global organizations, diplomacy, international law and norms, international conflict resolution, trade and economic relations, etc.

For example, global politics decided the unipolar order in recent decades. This unipolar order established the circumstances for international relations. Hence, global politics is navigating the dynamics of international relations through power, cooperation, conflict and interdependence.

In a conclusion, global politics and international relations both are important player in the global order. These players run the international order. Global politics influence by power dynamics and multilateral institutions. The economic alliances and sovereignty & security shaping the global politics. Global governance are core component of global politics. As well as international relations based on diplomacy, global cooperation and international law. Globalization and international treaties are main principle of international relations. The global politics directly influenced international relation. Global politics and international relations establish world orders. "Power is not zero-sum game" Henry Kissinger.