

Subheading: Corruption in Pakistan has increased, because many adults of the country are unbanked

Corruption in Pakistan has increased to a great extent, because many adults of the country are unbanked. It means they do not have their own bank accounts. They transfer and receive money while doing their businesses without using the facility of banks. In this way, chances of earning wealth through illegal means increase. Thus, Pakistan ranks 140 out of 180 countries of the world where corruption is concerned (Transparency International "Corruption Perception Index", 2022). Given all that, people without bank accounts are playing their major role in making this country more corrupt.
