

Topic: Is a Multi-Polar World Beneficial or Deterimental to Globalization?

1. Introduction

Multiple power centres at the international level denotes a multi-polar world. Rising powers always wish to be a hegemon at their level, and hence, build-up their blocs for the purpose, and compete others. Liberalists come up with their solutions, with globalization as a manifest; which is worth debatable.

2. Multiple power centres and Globalization

3. [Thesis] Activities Pursued to Build Stronger Blocs For Competition.

3.1 Leader States' Role in Globalization

3.2 Inter-States' Diplomatic Ties - Catalyst for Globalization

3.3 Cross-Border Economic Activities between allies

3.4 Enhancement of Cross-Cultural Ties within Blocs

3.5 Joint Ventures in Education and Research to advance relations

4. [Anti-Thesis] Globalization - Not Clunks of the Globe but the whole Globe

4.1 Relations Empowered with Allies only

4.2 Hateful sentiments and their consequences on the soul of Globalization

4.3 Power Politics - Affects on the affectivity of Global Institutions

4.4 Neighbors States Culture are already similar - Not a leap towards globalisation

4.5 Lack of knowledge sharing and Hindrance to Scientific Development

5. [Synthesis] Skills of Globalization are Learnt - Global Politics are Dynamic

5.1 Tools to advance Relationships - Achieved or Developed

5.2 Hated; a negative element - But Globalization Learnt

5.3 Regional Institutions Strengthen

5.4 Rigidity of Borders erodes - For other, neighboring cultures

5.5 Knowledge shared among a number of states - Scientific Leaps

6. Conclusion