In Pakistan, poverty is mainly linked to oppressed and discriminated societies. These societies do not receive their legitimate rights of education, employment opportunities, and salaries, due to which the slope of poverty rises. Therefore, the most ignored, oppressed, underpaid, and exploited societies comprise coal miners, security guards, sanitation workers, and petrol station employees. In addition to inhuman treatment, they do not even get their minimum wages, proper E.O.B.I., and social security. However, Shangla which is the remote town of KPK contains 70% of coal miners from all over Pakistan. Hence poverty is attached to vulnerable societies because of inequalities existing in our country.
