TITLE: MAN UNDER DIFFERENT CLIMATES.

Beneficial effects of cold are observed in northern part of Europe but the cold climate hinders the growth, energy and daily life activities of man. Likewise, hot climate, enhances the activity and moderate cold climate also gives them vigour through which they have to continue their daily life activities. Furthermore, life of man in tropics is different because there is little need of daily life material which includes food and shelter that can be easily obtained from this friendly earth. Change in behaviour and mindset of people occurs due to changing in season. So the life is easy in hot weather as compare to cold. Along with little effort is needed in temperate weather.
