

IS A MULTIPOLAR WORLD BENEFICIAL OR DETRIMENTAL FOR GLOBALISATION?

1-Introduction

Rise of multipolarity in the world has had mixed effects on globalisation, but the positive impacts outweigh the negative effects.

2- How multipolarity is beneficial for globalisation?

3- Multipolarity has positive impact on globalisation. (thesis)

3.a) balance of power

(how Pakistan deterred india by allying itself with China)

b) less wars

(United nations has prevented 11 majoe conflicts with its last 16 peace missions)

c) overcoming global inflation

(International trade reduced financial crisis after the great depression)

d) better relations

(European Union)

e) collective environmental care (Montreal protocol)

4- how multipolarity is detrimental to globalisation? (anti thesis)

4a)war for power dominance

(Italian /Japanese invasive policies in ww2)

b) more military activities

(german invasion of Poland in 1939)

c) global resistance would cause more inflation

(rise of financial instability after ww1)

d) worsening relations

(east/west germany divide after ww2)

e) ignorance for climate change (rising carbon emissions globally)

5- Multipolarity has more positive impacts than negative ones (SYNTHESIS)

5a) reasonable balance of power would benefit the developing countries (Russia and Us never used nuclear option)

b)war ratio would decline due to multilateral ties (Cuban crisis was resolved amicably)

C) would fight inflation causing factors collectively (WB, IMF, BRICs, asean, sco saarc helping reduce inflation)

D) better relations means efficient development (bri and b3w)

E) distribution of climate quota (MDGs and SDGs)

6-Conclusion