Solved Example No. 1

Read the following passage and answer the questions given at the end:

Keep the faculty of effort alive in you by all the uncalled for exercise every day. That is by being systematically self-denying or heroic in little unnecessary points, doing every day something for no other reason than that you would rather not to do it, so that when the hour of dire need draws high, it may find you ready to stand the test. Self-discipline of this sort is like the insurance which a man pays on his house and goods. The tax does him no good at the time, and possibly may never, bring him a return. But if the fire does come, his having paid it will be his salvation from ruin. So with the man who has daily disciplined himself to habits of concentrated attention, energetic action and self-denial in unnecessary things? He will stand like a tower when everything rocks around him and when his softer fellow-mortals are winnowed like chaff in the blast.
