The fear and frailty of human being led them to believe in divine power who governed the universe and structured their faiths. They sought guidance from the comprehension of god's wills. In ancient Greece, soothsayers used to decipher the gods' wishes by interpreting the signs and signals in the surroundings. They also used to decode dreams and palmistry. Sometimes, gods spoke directly to the beseecher through a seer who was shortly possessed by a divine mania. So, ancient Greek oracles, associated with specific gods, functioned on these practices for anticipating the future.
