

We are dealing with a very dramatic and very fundamental paradigm shift here. You may try" to lubricate your' social interactions with personality techniques and skills, but in the process, you may trunc We're ate the vital character base. You can't have the fruits without the roots. It's the principle of sequencing: Private victory precedes Public Victory. Self mastery and self-discipline are the foundation of good relationship with others. Some people say that you have to like yourself before you can like others. I think' that idea has merit but if you don't know yourself, if you don't control yourself, if you don't have mastery over yourself, it's very hard to like yourself, except in some short-term, psychup, superficial way. Real self-respect comes from dominion over*self from true independence. Independence is an achievement. Inter dependence is a choice only independent people can make. Unless we are willing to achieve real independence, it's foolish to try to develop human relations skills. We might try. We might even have some degree of success when the sun is shining. But when the difficult times come - and they will - We won't have the foundation to keep things together. The most important ingredient we put into any relationship is not what we say or what we do, but what we are. And if our words and our actions come from superficial human relations techniques (the Personality Ethic) rather than from our own inner core (the character Ethic), others will sense that duplicity. We simply won't be able to create and sustain the foundation necessary" for effective interdependence. The techniques and skills that really make a difference in human interaction are the ones that almost naturally flow from a truly independent character. So the place to begin building any relationship is inside ourselves, inside our Circle of Influence, our own character. As we become independent - Proactive, centered in correct principles, value driven and able to organize and execute around the priorities in our life with integrity - we then can choose to become interdependent - capable of building rich, enduring, highly productive relationships with other people.

Answer;

Title;- importance of inner self

One's own character is vital in social interaction. People usually focus on developing and clothing themselves with good techniques and skills for effective social association and developing good relationship but, it is useless if the foundation is being neglected. It cannot be achieved without Knowing oneself, it is crucial for self independence. People depend upon one another in the society that's why only dependent individual can develop this interdependence. Without true dependence of character it is impossible to acquire good relation with others. People may try to do so with some apparent techniques but it is useless because when atrocities occur in life other people easily catch the disguised effort of an individual. That's why the most important ingredient of building good relationship is not the actions but individual's own character. Good personality traits which comes from the bottom of one's self are vital for overall development of society. So the centre of achieving good relation is from the inside of one's own self. Hence by recognizing own self, individual can become independent and productive individual of the society.

