

"The Importance of morality in Intelligence"

Emotional sensitivity is an integral part of human intelligence. Intelligence can only be good if it is developed alongside morality. It is difficult for educators today to train people in morality as it has traditionally been done by the clergy. However, their love for the elite and failure to fulfill their responsibility make people avoid their guidance. The practical people, on the other hand, consider morality to be whatever the powerful want it to be. This approach threatens to explode the entire social order. Therefore, we must turn to educational institutions to take responsibility of inculcating morality in and teaching love and empathy to the people.