Analysis of Human Nature in Different Climates

questions may be submitted in separate pdf.

Cold climate is most beneficial in temperate countries. Human energy is paralyzed in the face of extreme hurdles and it does not grow in the opposite situation, while it is fully utilized when there is hope of overcoming difficulties. Similarly, it is paralyzed in extreme weather conditions while it grows and prospers in moderate cold climate.

Man does laborious work in moderate cold climate to fulfill his basic necessities of life and as a result needs nutritious food. On the other hand, he can survive with a very little effort in tropics. In the same way, his temperament differs in different climates. He is lazy and relaxed in hot weather while energetic and motivated in winters.
