2. Autonomy vs Integration

There is years
long demand on autonomy vs
integration in gender studies.
There are some arguments in the favour of autonomy while some support integration of gender studies.

Autonomy of gender studies

Autonomy of gender studies suggests that gender studies should be an autonomous subject. It should have autonomy in academic arena. The supporters of this view think that autonomy is a way for development of gender studies.
When gender studies will be autonomous and independent from other subjects, it would be able to form its own policies, raise its own funds, acquire scholarships and many more. In this way, gender studies would be grow.

Supporting arguments for gender studies' autonomy.

There are a number of arguments in the favor of autonomy of gender studies.

1. Autonomy will bring funds for gender studies

If the subject of gender studies will be kept autonomous, it would be able to collect funds for itself. Separate budget in the university will be allocated to the gender studies. It would be helpful for the growth of gender studies. For example, computer science is autonomous subject. It is allocated with separate budget in universities. If gender studies will be autonomous, it will enjoy some favour.

2. Autonomy brings scholarship when gender

Studies will be autonomous, it will be associated with separate scholarship. When students will be given scholarship, they will be attracted towards this subject due to which it will grow.

3- Independent Policies

Studies will help to make independent policies for gender studies. The autonomy will help to mitigate influence of other subject. If it is not integrated, it will have to follow policies formed for other subjects. It will not feel away the essence of subject.

4- Women (GRC) research

Women studies will be grow and conduct more research to raise women related issues if it kept autonomous. In Women research and Resource Center in Feroz Khan University, Peshawar, research on gender based issues are conducted. This institute is autonomous in its policies.

Funds from Government

There are many universities in Pakistan where women studies institutes are autonomous and these departments are getting separate funds from government. Women studies department in university of Karachi is one among those autonomous department of women studies which is being funded by government. These funds can be used for welfare of women by raising issues related to them.

5. Integration of Gender Studies

Integration of gender studies has the argument that gender studies should be integrated in other subjects. Gender studies should merge in other subject for its growth and development. Integration with other subjects will bring male students towards gender studies. It will be wise to work efficiently only if it is integrated.

6. Supporting arguments for Gender Studies

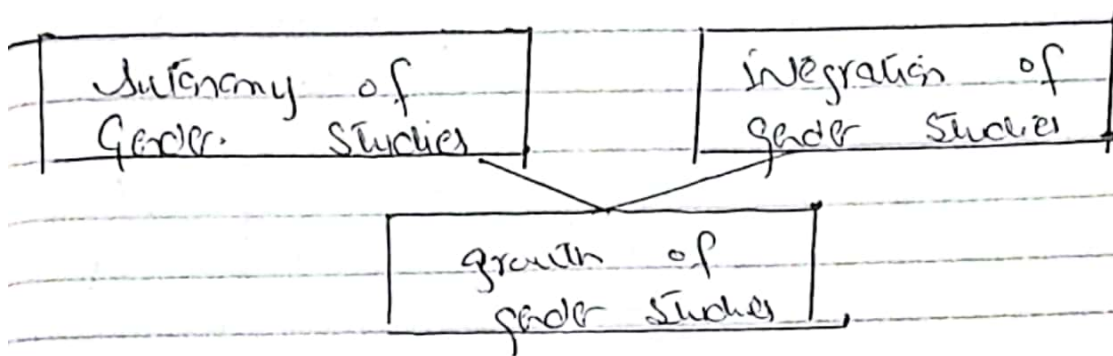

Supporting arguments of gender studies are as follow.

a. Integration will attracts male students. When gender studies will be integrated, it will be able for students of other subjects to study it. Thus gender study will be grow. For example, if it will be integrated, it may will be studied in multiple departments.

b. Attracts decision maker. Students of politic will be able to understand what are women related problem. Thus in future, they would be able to form policies for settlement women related issues.

c. Diversity in multi disciplinary course. When gender study will be integrated in other subjects, it would be helpful to understand gendered society in multiple context. Thus a vast view with knowledge of different dimensions will be acquired. This will pave way for growth of gender studies

6- Conclusion

Gender Studies is different from the women studies. There are acute difference between these two. Gender studies major concern is on gender socialization. While women studies focus on problem related to women. There is an going debate on the autonomy vs integration of gender studies. Above arguments show that autonomy will be more effective for the growth of post studies.

Movements in Liberal Feminism

one of the major movements of the liberal feminism. They worked for political right.

Association of Liberal Feminism

National Women Suffrage Association by Susan B.

American Women Suffrage Association by Lucy.

National American Women Suffrage Association was formed by combining above two.

Contribution: A door of political rights

Right to the vote was given to the women in Britain in 1918. In 1920, with nineteenth amendment in constitution, right to the vote was given to American women.

Criticism of Liberal Feminism.

Major criticism of liberal feminist was that it talked about problems of upper and middle class white women.

Black women role and demands in liberal feminism were ignored. Major focus was only on the political rights. Women in different areas have different problems which were ignored.

Radical Feminism

Radical feminism was also focused on women. Major belief of radical feminism was that women are suppressed. They are treated unequally. Society is gendered. In this gendered society, power are distributed as per gender. This division is in favor of men. Gender socialization for the sake of patriarchy. This is patriarchy due to which, women are suffering and are being treated unequally.

Major Strands of Radical Feminism.

1. Gender Suppression.

There is suppression of women. Basic cause of this suppression is patriarchy.

2. Differences

Differences in society exists. Roles are gendered. Division of labour is gendered. This division is in the favor of men.

3. Change in gender power relation

There should be a change in power relation. Patriarchy should be eliminated to ensure women's equality.

at present both end women's liberty. Both very far from each other. Both are to change the social structure to bring women's well-fare but both were in same direction. The motive of both theories is end of men's hegemony and gendered role.

Radical feminism consider
men as basic reason behind women's suppression. Liberal feminism believes that social structure is on fault due to which, women and men both are suffering. Both these theory have very great importance in gender studies.
