The Ramifications of Population Explosion

The conundrum of <sup>the</sup> population explosion is a key contemporary concern in sociology. The issue must be resolved rationally, otherwise, a mass population will face starvation and <sup>the</sup> reduction in quality of life. Furthermore, those who are having a ~~quite~~ standard life will voluntarily reduce their population while the underprivileged people will constantly proliferate their population. This will cause <sup>the</sup> population to increase disproportionately increasing the burden on national resources. Unfortunately, the issue is neglected constantly by ~~the~~ politicians, employers, militarists, and revolutionists for their ~~own personal~~ benefits. Even the religious bodies are silent on the matter due to the fear of losing people's support. All of them are resting on <sup>the</sup> primitive theory of <sup>the</sup> natural right to live. It is evident from ~~the~~ previous experiences that the threat is real

Paragraph not concluded. Main idea missed that it is the responsibility of state to control overpopulation. Use your own vocabulary as much as possible, without borrowing phrases from the original passage.
