

Are modern wars not holy wars?

Introduction:

Allah almighty has created human being as a master creation of this world, and this is based only on one thing that is cognitive ability. This means he can achieve highest level of civilization, progress, and prosperity. Yet, this is the fact that due to human greed and many differences, people were unlikely to cooperate with each other, so many wars were fought among them on the basis of religious enthusiasm. Such as, the Saxon wars in sixth century which lasted for thirty-two years; the Crusade wars in eleventh century which spanned for more than two centuries, or series of French wars in sixteenth century. Contrastingly, the two global level wars in twentieth century witnessed as more ideologically mobilized rather religiously, as well as the Cold war was among the two non-identical ideological blocks—communism and Capitalism. Finally, in twenty-first century, when world has entered into information age, the nature of war has changed; modern wars have been shifting from holy wars which are mushrooming on the diplomatic, economical, social and cyber fronts. Thus, the modern wars are not merely holy wars.

Work on neatness.

What is this?

Essay introduction?

Current affairs question??