

Title: Greeks and Their interpretation of God's sign

The diversity of nature and its ^{mysterious} compelled mankind to connect with its regulator; god. The signs provided by the god were the source of communication and guidance for the man. In Greek, soothsayers practiced the interpretation of these signs. They found them in naturally occurring phenomena, ⁱⁿ dreams, and in the behavior of their sacrificial animals. Moreover, many times god chose prophets or prophetess to directly communicate with people. These prophets had supernatural tendencies. Greeks had hierarchical structure for the interpretation of different types of divine signs. Therefore, they assigned different gods to different phenomenon of life. These gods functioned with mutual assistance of one another.

Idea is ok. Connectivity ok. Spelling mistakes.