The writer was in search of a new and less crowded destination for trip.

The writer ~~there~~ suggested Cherokee, a county in Oklahoma, ~~on~~ which writer agreed they ~~took off~~.

They reached a town called Qualla Boundary which had a heaven-like look. The town had a village called Oconaluftee Indian Village.

The village displayed life-style of 18th century Cherokee. Language barrier was not a problem from visiting local bazaar where shops were decorated with traditional objects.

They also learnt from a native that locals had other means of earning apart from tourism alone. There ~~was~~ was also 'Bingo weekend' arranged at the end of which different games were organized to attract tourists.

Last stop of writer was Qualla Boundary museum where objects of art were displayed including hand-woven oak baskets, stone carvings of wolves, etc.

The writer loved the trip and wished for another trip of similar kind in future.
