

Topic:

Human Development and Economic Sustainability.

Outline:① Introduction

Thesis Statement: Human development in terms of educating people, promulgating rule of law, promoting health, empowering women, discouraging wars and cooperating internationally can pave the way towards economic sustainability.

② How Human Development and Economic Sustainability is linked with each other?③ Focusing Human Development can lead towards economic well-being:

- (a) Educated nations are economically strong
- (b) More public participation leads towards less corruption
- (c) Better healthcare paves way towards better citizen engagement.
- (d) Women Empowerment leads towards national development
- (e) Ensuring human equality brings peace and harmony

④ Neglecting Human Development can lead towards Economic crisis:

- (a) Food and water crises become burden on economy
- (b) Exploiting environment leads towards catastrophic disasters
- (c) Wars ruining the economies of states
- (d) Neglecting religious freedom promotes anarchy
- (e) Uncontrolled population explosion causes economic insecurity

⑤ The way Forward for Better Human Development:

- (a) Spending GDP on education and health sector
- (b) Ensuring wealth regulation in society
- (c) International cooperation and peaceful dispute resolution
- (d) Empowering youth in IT brings economic prosperity
- (e) Providing incentives for focusing human development

⑥ Conclusion

Essay:

Transforming the lives of people through development yields good results in terms of economy. Throughout the history of mankind, humans focused on improving their lifestyles for that economic well-being was crucial. However, neglecting human development in this whole agenda of development yielded bad results which one can see as environmental crisis is going on. Therefore, the focus of every developmental agenda should be on human development as it not only transforms the lives of people, but also improves economic well-being. For instance, educating people makes a nation economically strong and encourages the masses to participate more in public affairs which eventually raises accountability and curtails corruption. Apart from this, ensuring human equality, especially empowering women, can lead towards national development and economic well-being. On the other hand, if different aspects of human development are neglected, then it raises economic crisis, like food and water crises outbreak diseases leading towards burden on economy. Exploitation of environment and natural resources due to overpopulation can also ruin economy. Likewise, religious intolerance and wars also lead towards economic collapse. Therefore, ensuring human development in terms of educating people, promulgating rule of law, promoting health, empowering women, discouraging wars, ensuring wealth regulation, cooperating internationally, empowering youth and providing incentives can pave the way towards economic sustainability.