

Genders Inequality : Low participation of women in politics

To begin with, low participation of women in elections reflect gender inequality around the globe. Sufficient participation of women in politics through principle of 'right to vote' is an essential mark of democracy. However, stories witnessed around the societies portray an opposite story. For instance, the Human Rights Charter 1998 ~~entails~~^{holds} that the deprivation of women's right to participate in elections prevails in the whole world, ~~but~~ in the developing countries especially in Asian ~~ones~~^{part} this is highly noticeable.

Women participation in politics is not as influential as men's, hence, that is a blunt indication of gender inequality in the world.
