

QUESTION 2

Oracles: The Voice of Greek Gods

To resolve the mystery of life and overcome their fear of unknown, human beings sought to correspond with a supreme entity. They believed in following his word as he decided their destiny and controlled the universe. In ancient Greece, the seers interpreted the signs of nature as a message from God. However, in the absence of signs the oracles became the voice of God who revealed his message in a state of trance. Hence, the oracles were consulted to predict the future. Consequently, different temples were reserved for oracles to communicate on behalf of the Gods. One such was Apollo, the Greek God, who delivered the messages of Zeus via its oracles at Delphi.
