

Title:

"An Exciting and exotic Trip To Cherokee"

DATE: ___/___/___

The writer planned to go on a trip. ~~The writer~~ He desired for an interesting place that fewer people visited on vacations. He delightfully agreed to John's proposal on visit to Cherokee. They were amazed by the fascinating mountainous view of Qualla boundary, a village in Cherokee. Occonulufee's indigenous crafts of 18th Century and the classical 'Unto Hill' Parade offer a reflection of Cherokee's history.

They were directed to souvenir shop by native ~~despite~~ language barriers. The shops displayed traditional items i.e. rubber tomahawks, war bonnets and repees made from turkey feathers and animal skin.

They were surprised by a middle aged man, ^{fluent English} named George who invited them for lunch at coffee shop.

George told that he had to work all day during tour season which was yet better than his hard past of living as wood cutter. The Cherokees depended upon other sources of income beside trade. Among them, Bingo weekend on Friday after noon gathered people and ^{brought} brings them income.

~~They~~ Their final ^{stop} was Qualla boundary museum that displayed wooden items and stone carvings. Filled with memories of the trip, the writer plans for another exciting trip at home.
