In Pakistan, children are more prone to delinquency. There is a gap between parents and children. Most of the time, parents prioritize one child over the other. In Pakistan children are judged on their school performance. All the children who naturally cannot compete with others develop a sense of disobeying.

Moreover, in Pakistan, there is a culture of educating minors with punishments and forcing them towards performing certain activities. Most of the time when children stay with those family members who are also in the habit of committing crimes, they socialize children according to their own ways. Therefore, skipping school and doing small robberies from home comes under the category of juvenile delinquency.

Theoretical Perspectives:-

Differential theory explaining the cause of Juvenile delinquency:

Differential opportunity theory is a sociological theory that posits that juveniles and young adults may turn to deviant activity because they are unable to become financially and socially successful via means that society deems legitimate. Differential opportunity theorists believe that those individuals who are unable to accomplish goals in ways are more likely to attempt to acquire capital and status via illegitimate or deviant means.

“The most effective guard against the delinquency is a father who is at the same time both strict and loving.” ~ Sheldon Gluek

Pakistan ratified the ~~Nations United~~ Nations Convention of the Rights of the child (UNCRC) and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR) thirty years back in 1990. However, despite the enactment of legislature about the issue, there are still some many gaps in country's criminal system when it comes to the treatment of Juveniles or even minors who have been merely accused of crimes. There are some remedies which are helpful to reduce the Juvenile delinquency in Pakistan:-

1- Strengthening the Justice System:-

Establishment of specialized courts for juvenile cases, ensuring fair and fast trials and implementing effective rehabilitation programs for juvenile offenders.

2- Social Welfare Programs:-

Introducing programs that provide support and opportunities for underprivileged youth, including access to education, vocational training, and the employment opportunities.

3- Family Support and Counseling:-

Provide counseling services to families to improve parenting skills, address domestic issues and strengthen family bonds.

4- Community involvement:-

Encouraging community participation through youth centers, sports, clubs, and mentorship programs to engage young individuals in positive activities and discourage delinquent behaviour.

5- Awareness campaigns:-

conducting public awareness campaigns to educate the general public, parents and schools about the causes and consequences of juvenile delinquency, as well as the importance of early intervention and prevention.

6- Rehabilitation and Reintegration:-

Developing comprehensive rehabilitation programs that focus on education, vocational training, and psychological support to facilitate the successful reintegration of juvenile offenders into society.

7- Collaboration between government and NGOs:-

Foster collaboration between government agencies, non-governmental organizations and civil society to work together in addressing juvenile delinquency and implementing preventive measures.

These remedial measures, when implemented effectively, can help reduce juvenile delinquency in Pakistan by addressing the underlying causes and providing young individuals with the necessary support and opportunities for positive development.
