

Changing world order and foreign policy of Pakistan

Outline

1. Introduction

Thesis statement: The world order is changing. And, in order to take benefits from the status quo, countries are altering their foreign policies. Though Pakistan has somehow changed its foreign policy, yet it still needs to take a few prudent steps to have more advantages.

2. Correlation between changing world order and foreign policy of Pakistan

3. World order is shifting from geostrategic to geoeconomic

- a) Preference of trade wars to conventional wars
- b) The US longing for conflicts seems to be diminishing
- c) Afghan government is preferring nation building to conflict
- d) India has started working with several countries, instead of restricting its relations with a single state
- e) European countries have started working with foes of the US
- f) Arab countries have started preferring economic purposes to Muslim sentiments
- g) To become economically strong, KSA has decided to leave its old way of confrontation with Iran

4. How Pakistan is molding its foreign policy according to the changing world order

- a) Pakistan has shifted its foreign policy from geostrategic to geoeconomic
- b) Pakistan has stopped considering those demands of the US that are against its economic interests
- c) To grow economically, Pakistan has decided not to restrict its ties with a few specific states
- d) Pakistan has decided to remain neutral during war between the two states
- e) Pakistan has decided to have cordial ties with all Muslim countries, rather than enjoying friendly relations with a few Muslim states
- f) Pakistan has changed its policy from being one camp to regional connectivity

5. Recommendations for Pakistan to run its foreign policy

- a) To become economically strong, Pakistan must try to become the part of B3W along with BRI
- b) To reduce the dollar outflow from the country, Pakistan must try to trade with India

- c) To take economic benefits from the resources of Afghanistan, Pakistan should continue its efforts of maintaining good ties with the running administration of Taliban
- d) Pakistan must endeavor to maintain its relations friendly with all the countries, so that it can compete with the rest of the world

6. Conclusion